

Assignment #1

1. Get 5 websites

- Amazon (<https://www.amazon.com/>)
- Shopee (<https://shopee.ph/>)
- Lazada (<https://www.lazada.com.ph/#?>)
- Etsy (<https://www.etsy.com/>)
- Ebay (<https://www.ebay.com/>)

2. Classify (E-commerce, personal, or gov)

- Amazon (E-commerce)
- Shopee (E-commerce)
- Lazada (E-commerce)
- Etsy (E-commerce)
- eBay (E-commerce)

3. List all the features available in each website

Amazon

- One click purchasing for products on the website, prime membership (faster and free shipping), massive product catalog, subscription services.

Shopee

- Communication between buyer and seller, flash sales and daily deals, vouchers and coins, live streaming sales in the platform, strong seller focus.

Lazada

- Brand partnerships in South East Asian countries, have official brand stores, live streaming sales in the platform, and product protection.

Etsy

- Focuses on handmade, custom, and vintage items, made-to-order products, communication between buyer and seller.

eBay

- Auction selling style, global shipping, strong used and refurbished market, negotiation between users on "Best Offers".

4. List the final features that are not in the 5 websites/per category

In the 5 online platforms, all have no clear price history tracking, cannot compare multiple sellers/items side by side, some reviews can be fake or manipulated by the sellers, and no consistent authentication for products being sold on the websites.

5. Decide what type of website/area you are interested in

These websites display various items and products that can be useful to many. Some items aren't in supermarkets so users tend to search on these online platforms. These websites offer deals and sales on various products lower than buying in the physical stores.

Summary/Overview:

These 5 online platforms listed above function as e-commerce websites that display various items on the internet for users to browse, sell, and buy. Making it convenient and easy for them to buy certain products that they need without having the hassle to go somewhere for what they're buying. The website does not include communication between the buyers, it is only available between seller and buyer. The layouts are cramped, typography is boring, yet the products are organized to each category available in the platforms.

SWOT ANALYSIS (Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities, Threats)

| Websites      | Strengths (S)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | Weaknesses (W)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | Opportunities (O)                                                                                                                                                                                                          | Threats (T)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
